

Imagine you are a hiring manager

As you begin to apply for jobs as a BI analyst, it's important to understand a hiring manager's perspective. If you know what a hiring manager is searching for in a candidate, you can better prepare for the job application and interview process.

For this discussion prompt, consider the following:

Imagine you are a hiring manager searching for a BI candidate. What are the top three technical skills you'd search for? What are the top three interpersonal skills you'd search for?

What would you most like to convey about the assets you'll bring to a BI job? How will you share that information in a way that convinces the hiring manager that your assets are invaluable.
