

Your learning journey

In this part of the program, you explored data modeling and ETL processes for extracting data from source systems, transforming it into formats that better enable analysis and drive business processes and goals. You also used strategy documents to create a pipeline system that delivered necessary data to reporting tables for your end-of-course project. Coming up next, you're going to learn about generating reports, visualizations, and dashboards to share findings with stakeholders.

Take a moment to reflect on everything you have learned so far.

How have your views on business intelligence changed since you started this program?

Has this course expanded your understanding of concepts you were already familiar with?

What have you learned that you didn't already know about?