Job-search resources for business intelligence professionals

As you continue through this course, you'll encounter resources and best practices to help you land a job as a business intelligence professional or advance your career. This reading provides you with some resources you can explore and bookmark to use on your job search.

Job search sites

There are a lot of job search sites, and it can be difficult to find ones that are useful in your specific field. Here are a few resources designed for BI professionals:

- Built In ↗: Built In is an online community specifically designed to connect startups and tech companies with potential employees. This is an excellent resource for finding jobs specifically in the tech industry, including BI. Built In also has hubs in some U.S. cities and resources for finding remote positions.
- Crunchboard ↗: Crunchboard is a job board hosted by TechCrunch. TechCrunch is also the creator of CrunchBase, an open database with information about start-up companies in the tech industry. This is another valuable resource for people looking for jobs specifically in tech.
- Dice ↗: Dice is a career marketplace specifically focused on tech professionals in the United States. It provides insights and information for people on the job search.
- DiversityJobs ↗: DiversityJobs is a resource that hosts a job board, career and resume resources, and community events intended to help underrepresented job seekers with employers currently hiring. This resource is not tech specific and encompasses a lot of industries.
- Diversify Tech ↗: Diversify Tech is a newsletter that is designed to connect underrepresented people with opportunities in the tech industry, including jobs. Their job board includes positions from entry-level to senior positions with companies committed to diversity and inclusion in the field.
- LinkedIn ↗: You've learned about LinkedIn as a great way to start networking and building your online presence as a BI professional. LinkedIn also has a job board with postings from potential employers. It has job postings from across the world in all sorts of industries, so you'll need to commit some time to finding the right postings for you, but this is a great place to begin your job search.

You can also search for more specific job boards depending on your needs as a job seeker and your career interests!

Interview and resume resources

In addition to applying to jobs, you will want to make sure your interview skills and resume are polished and ready to go. If you completed the Google Data Analytics Career Certificate, you already learned a lot about these things. Feel free to review these resources ↗ anytime. Or, if you are new to Google Career Certificates, check them out now! They provide useful interview strategies and clear steps for developing a winning resume!

Mark as completed

👍 Like   👎 Dislike   ⚐ Report an issue